I have picked a BA with Vishwakarma University's travel and tourism programme.
The course could one day help me find a job that combines two of my biggest passions — travel and photography.

Now, we live in a world that's constantly sharing photos or posts from the holidays we go on. In fact, never have we travelled so much.
From the cars we drive, to the clothes we wear, everything's focused on that one trip scheduled for the winter or summer holidays. International tourist arrivals in Europe hit 671 million in 2017 — a stunning 8% increase from a weak 2016.
Asia saw a 6% rise while the Americas registered a healthy 3% boost. These are the strongest numbers in seven years.

The growth in the sector is what convinced me to move into it after years as a science student. It's a bold step, but it's also a brave new world.

The travel and tourism programme will need me to write, take good photographs and cover ground.

I will also get to meet new people, stay in foreign countries and understand different cultures. Only as travellers can we really appreciate the diversity this planet packs.

Programmes offering such courses have existed for years, but I think we have reached what can only be described as the "epoch". One can now sit behind a computer in Pune and plan a trip to Paris.
